Arab students in America protest treaty

DALLAS, Texas, March 16 (AP)--More than 50 Arab students, in a protest against the peace treaty to be signed by Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, have begun a hunger strike in the offices of the Arab League, which gave its endorsement to the action.

A man, who identified himself only as a palastinian named Sami, said the members of the Organisation of Arab Students will go without food until Saturday to "condemn the peace treaty signed by Begin and Sadat.' It is a separate treaty by the leaders of the nations. It does not represent the Arab masses and especially the Palestinians who are homeless," he said. Dr. Munir Bayoud, Director of the Arab League Office in Dallas, said his organisation has given its full cooperation to the demonstration. The league represents 22 Arab nations, including the Palestine Liberation Organization, he

"Students from all parts of the Arab World have come here to use our communication facilities to send telegrams to the Arab World. They have come from various cities around the United States to denounce the action by President Sadat to sign the treaty between with Israel against the will of the vast majority of Arab peoples, and governments" Dr. Bayoud said.

They want their voices to be heard in a very peaceful and organised way," he added.

Autonomy is another name for occupation here that the Palestine Liberation Organisation By Arik Bachar Strip to serve as a model for the occupied West

GAZA, Gaza Strip, March 16--A dozen years under Israeli occupation have made Gaza Mayor Rashed Al Shawa a sceptical man. Therefore, indications over the past week that a Middle East peace could materialise soon raised none of his hopes that his Palestinian people might be neater to independence after centuries of foreign rule The totally unexpected breakthrough in peace talks is now almost certain to lead to the signing of an Egyptian-Israeli separate peace treaty next

But Mayor Shawa smiles bitterly when anybody suggests that the autonomy plan envisaged for the occupied Gaza Strip would do anything to change the life and future of its 400,000 inhabitants.

"Autonomy is merely another name for occupation, he said. "Prime Minister Menschem Begin has stripped the autonomy of any true "An autonomy such as the one defined by Mr.

"Mr. Begin has announced once again that Israel has the full right to all the occupied Arab lands," he said, "Mr. Begin has made it explicit that Israel regards Jerusalem as the capital of Istael, not recognising the rights of Moslems in the holy city."

The draft Egyptian-Israeli accord calls for negotiations with Palestinians on occupied territories for the establishment of a self-rule council. Mayor Shawa does not believe such a council will have the popular support of the Palestinians. "But of course, Israel can impose the plan with the help of the United States, just as it imposed its occupation with U.S. arms and funds," he said. Mr. Shawa is certain that no influential leader on the West Bank or in Gaza would be willing to talk to the Israelis. It is agreed amonest Arabs

The reason why

IN THE INEVITABLE aftershock of the announcement that the signing of an Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty is imminent, it is useful to step back a few paces and put the entire picture into proper perspective.

There are many reasons why the majority of the Arab people cannot accept the formula with the U.S., Egypt and Israel have devised. The proposed treaty, and the American custodial role which it entails, present very different dangers to the range of people whom it will affect: to the Egyptians, it means being removed from the common Arab ranks and possibly deprived of their historic interrelationship with the rest of the Arah World: to Israel's Arab neighbours, it means Israel can re-arm and refuel itself with impunity, while not budging from the occupied territories; to the Palestinians, above all, it represents a conspiracy to deprive them of their God-given national rights.

Within the broader contexts of Middle East stability and superpower competition, the treaty also promises to shift the balance to the ultimate detriment of all those who believe that this region must be kept free of outside interference and Big Power rivalry.

Above all, for those who seek a just, honourable and lasting peace, it threatens -- by leaving so much to the discretion of an Israel which has demonstrated that its voracious appetite for expansion and for the perpetual subjugation of the Arab population living under its sway is not sated -- to set this cause back 30 years or more.

Out of all these concerns, however, it is best to keep always in mind the basic reason why this treaty, and this approach to peace, is unacceptable. This is the fact that the inhabitants of the occupied territories--people living under alien military rule in their own land, whose children and born as foreigners in the land of their forefathers -- are being forced to accept a spurious form of "autonomy" which aims to ensure that they shall never be masters of their own destiny. No other people in history, even those who were born, grew up and died under colonial rule, have ever been faced with such a prospect. While the world manages, with time, to satisfy itself that Palestinian aspirations are being met, a people shall remain nutionless.

Except that they won't, of course, because the struggle will go on.

ARAB PRESS COMMENTARY

AL RA'I FRIDAY SAYS THAT His Majesty King Hussein's Cabinet address on Thursday was delivered in order to wake up a world anaesthetised to the reality of the Middle East problem by the Camp David separate peace agreement between Egypt and Israel. The paper goes on to say that what is going on under the guise of making a peace treaty is far more serious than any other event which has taken place in the last three decades; this is mainly because the Camp David agreement is aimed at allowing Israel to swallow up the occupied Arab lands, obliterating the Arah and Islamic landmarks in Jerusalem, uprooting the rightful owners of Palestine and then kicking them out of their homes to suffer future uncertainties.

His Majesty's speech stressed the need for coordinated Arab and international action to put an end to the deterioration of conditions for Palestinians in the occupied territories; and for the Arabs to lead such a move, with the purpose of laying the foundations for a just and durable peace. Arabs should first of all heal the split in their ranks; put an end to the wars in southern Lebanon and the two Yemens, and finally they should quickly start building up their military strength to the level where it will be capable of dealing with the changed military situation created by the exit of Egypt from the ranks of the confrontation states. The Arabs must find the means to stand fast in the face of the Camp David plans which are designed to impose a fait accompli solution on the Middle East, the paper concludes.

International School walk raises JD 1,000

Text and photos by Lee S. Tesdell Special to the Jordan Times

AMMAN, March 16--The first walker to register his name was Jason Seward, a student in Class 5 at the International Community School (I.C.S.). The event, held in the hills to the northeast of Amman this morning, was organised to raise money for equipment for the new school building to be put up at Khilda, the starting point for the trek. Among the distinguished walkers were Crown Prince Hassan and Mr. Abu Nuwwar, Mayor of Amman.

Jason was one of about 300 enthusiastic souls who wended their way through green fields of wheat, lentils and spring wild flowers to the walk's destination, the Royal Automobile Club near the 8th circle where a barbecue awaited the determined and faithful. For the adults it was a time to get much needed exercise and have a chat with friends, for the children it was a time for a good romp in the out-of-doors and for all it was a community effort on behalf of a good cause: education of children from the international community in Jordan. The present student body is composed of 27 nationalities.

"It is simply wonderful...it is a good example for other schools... I have two daughters who walked." Prince Hassan commented to the Jordan Times during the walk. Both of his children attend the I.C.S. Prince Hassan, dressed in jaunty walking clothes, set a lively pace for the rest of us. He was greeted along the way by a group of villagers, whose offer of coffee he couldn't refuse.

Amman's Mayor Ma'an Abu Nuwwar told the Jordan Times that he was pleased to see the large crowd. It included a number of his own children who attend the I.C.S. "It's especially nice." he said, "to see His Royal Highness Prince Hassan with us." Mr. Abu Nuwwar urged his children on as he skillfuly picked his own way through the rocks.

Each person who decided to participate in the walk was to sign up as many sponsors as possible. The sponsor would pledge a sum of money to be paid to the walker if he completed the walk. Roy Blackman, the organiser of the walk, told the Jordan Times at the starting point that "we're trying to raise a large amount of money." Originally, he said, "it was to have been a small walk... but in the past week the response has quadrupled." At the completion of the walk, Mr. Shekar Ravasam, the treasurer of the effort said that "around JD 1,000" had been col-

The money will be used specifically for books, sports equipment and playground accessories. The land for the school itself has been selected and bought, but construction has not yet begun.

Those responsible for the walk agreed that the main point of the event, other than fund-raising, was strengthening of community spirit amongst the families who send their children to the I.C.S.

One of the hardest working volunteers was Doreen Campbell, who registered the names of each walker who completed the trek. Her final tally was 295 people, 3 dogs. 2 lizards and a tortoise. As AMMAN, March 16--Mr. Masao Hino is a top Japanese performer on a space-age instrument known as an "electone". The electronic organ inspired its name but it is much more than the name implies as Mr. Hino has been demonstating during his present four-day visit to Jordan.

Mr. Hino's first performances brought an enthusiastic reaction from Amman's music lovers. Over 500 students at the College de la Salle (Freres) sang and clapped along in rhythm with Arabic melodies Mr. Hino had only just Tired but still smiling, Mr. Hino talked to the Jordan Times, reluctantly about his life, but ardently about his music.

Masao Hino was born in Tokyo in 1045, the only child of a very musical father who played not only the piano and the electronic organ, but also the "biwa", a Japanese 'ud-like instrument that was originally introduced to Japan from Persia. Mr. Hino's first aspiration was to become a classical concert pianist. At the age of eight he started to devote his time and effort to playing the piano, spending long exhausting hours on special finger training in addition to regular practicing. He was an electronic organ for the first time when he was 13. It wasn't until six years later, however, that he started playing the electone seriously. At age 21 he decided to become a professional organist.

He tried to communicate his reasons for the change in careful English: "The piano has a beautiful sound, and classical music/is beautiful. But the electone not only produces piano sound, it can reproduce so many other kinds of sound as well. It is a full orchestra by itself. Also, one can express one's feelings much more readily with an electronic organ than with a piano. You can also improvise easily on the electone."

Although this is Mr. Hino's first visit to Jordan, he has tried Arabic music once before, on his trip to Cairo in 1978. As he passed through Athens on his way there, he bought a record of Arabic music and listened to it.

This time he did not bring any Arabic songs or music with him as part of his repertoire, so Mrs. Zananiri, Yamaha's agent in Jordan, acted swiftly to remedy this by providing him with whatever Arabic music sheets she could lay her hands on. With admirable sight-reading, Mr. Hino learnt the melodies in five minutes. Then he set himself to improvising his own variations on them. The result, as one can deduce from the audience's excited response, seems more than satisfactory.

Mr. Hino has passed on his talent to two lovely seven-year-old twin daughters. They have been playing the piano and the organ

Special to the Jordan Times

AMMAN, March 13-- As part of a three and a half year programme to up-grade the quality and quantity of Mother and Child Health (MCH) centres in Jordan, nine new centres will be opened and fully equipped this year.

"This is part of a programme supported by the United Nations Fund for Population Activities (UNFPA)." Dr. Tawfiq Lubani, Deputy Director of MCH centres. told the Jordan Times this week. "The project began two years ago and aims to open six new centres each vear."

In 1977 ten new centres were opened, however, last year none were. With the nine new centres planned for this year there will be a total of 60 centres in the country.

"Some of the centres are financed from the budget of the UNFPA and others by the Ministry of Health," Dr. Lubani said. The centres provide pregnant women, and children up to five years of age with treatment and regular health services, tree of charge provided they are regiswoman can register by merely going to one of the centres and filling out an application form.

Each centre has its own staff of at least one qualified midwife, and assistant nurse and maid. A doctor pays regular visits to the centre twice a week for supervision and treatment of special cases. The centres are mainly geared to helping mothers deliver babies in their

One of the main factors determining when the new centres will open is the availability of midwives. Dr. Lubani noted, as there is a shortage of them. "This is our most difficult problem," he added. Most of the 51 centres have one, but some have two. There are seven MCH centres in Amman, each staffed with two mid-wives. In addition, the main centre in Amman, located on Jabal Ashratieh, has eight.

Iraqi commercial delegation due in Amman

AMMAN, March 16 (JNA)--An Iraqi commercial delegation headed by Director of the Exports Department Mr. Fuad Abdulmajeed is due here tomorrow for a three-day visit to Jordan.

The delegation will hold discussions with officials at the Ministry of Industry and Commerce and the Chamber of Industry and Commerce in order to develop economic cooperation and expand the volume of trade between Jordan and Iraq.

The search is on to find new ways to combat six arget diseases which are endemic in tropical counries. The World Health Organisation is devoting 325.5m to research this year with a special accent on :arrying out the work in the worst-hit countries.

By Thomas Land

ENEVA--The United Nations orid Health Organisation HO) has launched an intertional programme intended to adicate six tropical diseases accting or threatening more than 1000 million people which may artiv lead to field trials.

"There has been a very rapid, if at explosive, scientific and chnological growth of the progmme." the director-general of HO Dr. Halfadan Mahler cently told a financial conrence in Geneva which ended by irmarking $25.5 million for search and development in 479. The scheme has been sciewed this year in the context. IWHO's global strategies during te annual conference of the rganisation's executive board. The 4x diseases have acquired insiderable economic impornee by slowing down industrial evelopment in Third World sentries, in many places, parneulatly in Africa, man-made takes and irrigation schemes intended to improve living conditions have in fact aftered the local ecology for the worse and aggravated major disease problems. The malaria-carrying mosquito, for example, thrives in such an environment while many of its strams are developing resistance to pesticides used for their control.

A spokesman for the World Bank, which recently joined the co-ordinating board of the global health project, comments that the development of manpower and the strengthening of research institutions in the endemic countries of the tropics are intimately related to the search for fresh medical tools. The World Bank now places special emphasis on integrating preventive and curative measures into all development schemes which it finances in these areas.

The scheme is unusual in its heavy involvement of the developing countries in the solution of

The programme is concerned with training both leaders of research and supporting staff in the laboratory, clinic and field of the most affected countries... of Africa, Asia and Latin

The six principal targets of the programme are: malaria, which is currently spreading at a dangerous rate and which kills more than a million children a year in Africa alone: schistosomiasis or bilharzia, an insidious and debilitating disease caused by tiny worms spread mainly by fresh-water snails: filariasis including onchocerciasis, leading to blindness, general ill health and lack of vitality: trypanosomiasis or sleeping sickness transmitted by African tsetse fly or Chagas disease in its Latin American form which can kill through heart failure: leichmaniasis, whose mancutaneous lesion to fatal systematic infections called kalaazar; leprosy, a dreaded communicable disease associated with poverty, which has shown increasing resistance to common drug treatment. Since several major scientific problems which must be solved apply to most or all of these diseases, the programme includes common activities on epidemiology, operational research, vector control and socio-economic and bio-medical research. The programme was launched two years ago, intended to be a continuous effort for 20 years or more. But some of its early benefits in new drugs, diagnostic tests, vaccines, pesticides and other public health tools are luture. One such early achievement may well be an experimental development of vaccines against leprosy and schistosomiasis.

Dr. Mahler says that in the past the rich countries tended to be the ifestations range from disfiguring principal beneficiaries of the global health programmes which they financed, but all the world's peoples are to benefit from this one. He argues that the technology developed by the programme. in its broadly-based framework of research, may well have a much greater and more immediate impact on public health in the developing countries than anything achieved before.

It is increasingly felt that research should be performed within the tropical countries themselves for immediate and long-term reasons. The biochemistry of a parasite, the synthesis of a new durg or even a disease simulated in an animal model can certainly be studied wherever the means are available. expected in the foresecable. But only where the diseases are rampant can scientists begin to understand the crucial interaction vaccine against malaria. Television's natural advantage has always been its cosiness; not only the cosiness of the viewer's being sequestered in his own living-room, but the cosiness of continuity. then entered dummy by overtaking the nine of hearts with the ten.

Now declarer led a diamond and, when East followed low, he inserted his nine. West won the king, but he was end played. If he returned a diamond, it would be into declarer's acc-jack tenace: if he led a black suit. declarer would rull in one hand while discarding a diamond loser from the other. Either way, declarer would make his contract.

It is normal for East to play "second hand low" when a diamond is led from dummy. It is also incorrect on this hand, regardless of declarer's diamond holding.

If deciarer holds A-K-J, East's play is immaterial. Declarer has ten tricks and the finesse will give an overtrick. The only hope of defeating the contract is to presume that West holds a high diamond honor-and to cater to the possibility that it is the king. Since declarer has no second entry to dummy. East must put up the queen of diamonds when that suit is led from the table.

This has a devastating effect. If declarer wins, he must lead diamonds from his own hand and will have to iose two tricks in the suit. His only alternative is to allow East to hold the queen in the hope that East started with the king-queen. When East now returns a low diamond, declarer must put in the jack. He will thus lose two diamond tricks, and end een of spades, up down one.

Learning on the job

BONN -- School-leavers in West Germany who start an apprenticeship in any of the 24 accredited building trades this autumn will serve their first year at school instead of on a building site as in the past. Construction is the first industry to introduce a compulsory basic fraining year as part of the apprenticeship system as recommended by the Bonn government. For an initial 12 months apprentices in two dozen building trades will study a joint curriculum of general knowledge, building theory and practical training in basic skills such as bricklaying and the various bonds, as shown here, Once they have completed this basic year builder's apprentices will not only have served their first year but also taken their school certificate (should they have failed to pass beforehand) and gained a comprehensive insight into the profession that should help them to make up their minds on the trade they would really like to take up. ANKARA, March 16 (R)-The Central Treaty Organisation (CENTO), the western Asian defence alliance set up in 1955. collapsed yesterday after Turkey joined Iran and Pakistan in pulling

The government of Premier Bulent Ecevit announced Turkey's withdrawal after a special cabinet meeting, leaving Britain on paper as the only remaining full member of CENTO. The United States is an associate member.

The cabinet announcement made clear that the alliance was being wound up. It said: The government has decided to make the necessary initiatives at CENTO neadquarters (here) to terminate CENTO.

The alliance was formed 24 years ago with Iraq among its founder members and was at first known as the Baghdad Pact. But Iraq withdrew in 1959, and the pact had been largely dormant as a military alliance in recent years. Pakistan announced on Monday that it had left CENTO and

Iran followed suit the next day. CENTO's Turkish Secretary General Kamuran Gurun said later that he thought the alliance's headquarters in this capital's bustling old town would close shortly. Mr. Ecevit said before the cabinet meeting that solutions to any problems which might arise from recent developments in the western Asian region could best be found through good relations and solidarity among the countries, in the area.

Turkey, which borders on both Iran and the Soviet Union, is a member of the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation (NATO).

Iran expels U.S. activist Schoenman

TEHRAN, March 16 (R)--The Entezam told a press conference Iranian government yesterday expelled Ralph Schoenman, a U.S. lawyer and human rights activist, and said it would also deport American Women's rights campaigner Kate Millett.

Government spokesman Amir

that Mr. Schoenman left by plane for London this morning. "We lost our temper. We couldn't put up with him any more," he added.

Mr. Entezam said Kate Millett who has been campaigning for women's rights in Tehran during the past week, would also be expelled. "We have many problems and these people are adding to the problems," he said.

Miss Millett has been involved in demonstrations against the increasingly strict enforcement of Islamic laws on women.

Mr. Schoenman, a former secretary to the late British philosopher Lord Bertrand Russell, was active in Britain's nuclear disarmament campaign in the

Mr. Schoenman, had been publicly campaigning in Tehran against what he described as a pro-western "anti-democratic threat" from the continued activities of former officers of the Shah's armed forces.

At a press conference last month, he accused the internal security chief of Ayatollah Khomeini of having asked him to obtain United States support to crush anti-western elements in

The security chief, Colonel Nasrollah Tavakoli, later resigned his post, but said he did not quit because of Mr. Schoenman's

Jean Monnet, 'father of Europe,' dies at 91

PARIS, March 16 (AP)-Jean Monnet, the man known as the father of Europe, died today at his home near Montfort L'Amaury. sources at the headquarters of the European Economic Com-

His first major step toward European unity was a six nation pool of coal and steel resources which later became known as the European Economic Community.

Mr. Monnet was never a member of a government, but was, as American author Theodore H. White called him, "a broker of ideas." He brought statesmen together by demonstrating how his ideas were in the interest of those concerned, persisting when leaders resisted or hesitated.

He was born in the town of Cognac on Nov. 9, 1888, the son of a distinguished French distiller. He abandoned the idea of a university education and instead went to Canada to sell his father's cognac, a period he has described as invaluable background for bargaining.

"I can wait a long time for the right moment," he once remarked. In Cognac, they are good at waiting. It is the only way to make a good brandy.

In 1919 he became deputy secretary general of the League of Nations. He gradually expanded his experiences and contacts, reorganising the Chinese railways, floating international loans and handling legal entanglements. As a broker on Wall Street, he made a fortune and then lost it in the 1929 crash. Mr. Monnet developed the art of making friends and influencing people. For five decades, he counted leaders of the free world nations among his close personal friends. Presidents Franklin D. Roosevelt, Dwight Eisenhower and John Kennedy, Gen. George C. Marshall, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, British prime ministers from Winston Churchill to Edward Heath, and French leaders from Charles De Gaulle to Valery Giscard d'Estaing liked and admired him and turned to him for advice.

Mr. Monnet developed the revolutionary theory that culminated in the Common Market: That nation-states can cooperate effectively only to the extent that they abandon parts of their sovereignty to a joint authority.

When Mr. Monnet retired from public life in 1975, he described the Common Market as "the major achievement of our era."

Brittany beaches white as ever as Amoco Cadiz sinks to its grave national, for half a billion dollars.

PORTSALL, March 16 beaches and harbour bottoms with (R)-Winter storms have at last sunk the rusting hulk of the Amoco Cadiz off the coast of France, and the sea view from this Finistere fishing port is as idyllic now as it was before the fullyladen supertanker ran on to the Portsall reefs a year ago

More than 200 kilometres (125 miles) of rugged coastline was polluted when the Liberianregistered vessel spewed out its entire 223,000-ton cargo of crude oil, hitting western Brittany's two stable industries--fishing and

Just 12 months later, the Finistere beaches are silvery white again, the fishing boats come and go with the tide and the region's hotel and restaurant owners are preparing for the holiday rush.

But the apparent return to normal has not effaced the bitter memories of that stormy night when Portsall residents woke up to the suffocating stench of the oil lapping on the beach and in the harbour.

Throughout the summer, thousands of troops and volunteers took part in a vast coastal clean-up operation, pumping oil from the water and scraping makers. In fact, there were almost 1.5 million fewer tourists in western Brittany last summer than in 1977. Even resorts untouched by the gigantic oil slick reported wholesale cancellations.

Fish and seabirds died by the thousands, although a year later it seems that the damage of coastal fish stocks fell short of decimation. But some of Brittany's main ical of many "coal rush" towns in Appalachia, Bursting to the seams with a rapidly growing population, it is struggling to cope with the social consequences created by the renewed demand for coal.

BECKLEY, West Virginia - The long line of late model cars and pick-up trucks creeps past fast food outlets and small well-kept houses lining the narrow main route through Beckley. West Virginia. On the outskirts of the town, prefabricated and cramped mobile homes with neatly planted vegetable gardens occupy what flat lands are available in the mountainous terrain.

Local officials fear the area may become the world's largest mobile home park, so scarce and expensive is available housing. Highway development is far behind the rest of the nation. Roads are frighteningly narrow, steep and riddled with potholes.

Mountain water systems are expensive to construct and are often inadequate. Sewer construction is without federal funds and is too expensive for the local authorities. Only two per cent of the county's housing has sewers and more than 5,000 houses actually run their sewer lines directly into the once-clear mountain

In West Virginia, absentee landlords, i.e. land companies, control or own two-thirds of all private land. Because there are no large parcels of land for building, few contractors with any significant capacity have moved into the area.

To find a solution for the housing shortage in the Beckley area. nine local members of the United Mine Workers (UMW) have joined forces with nine coal companies in an unprecedented effort to work on the problem together. Their combined clout has produced some land grants and sales from large landowners, and about 300 units for low and middle income residents are planned or are under construction. But these will hardly make a noticeable dent
